Your classroom must reflect the unit theme you are studying. The learning centers must have materials that relate to the particular unit theme you are studying. Center toys, materials, books, etc. should be rotated at least twice a month to ensure the children stay interested and challenged.

If you are getting bored with your room, you know your children are bored with it too. New materials in your learning center, bright cheery bulleting boards, and interesting hands-on activities will help with your classroom management. Take a critical look at your classroom set-up and your center materials.
